

ROOSEVELT HAS TACKLED N. R. A. REORGANIZATION

PRESIDENT TO ANNOUNCE HIS PLANS SUNDAY

Will Speak To Nation Over Radio From White House

By William L. Beale, Associated Press Staff Writer.

Washington, Sept. 26.—(P)—President Roosevelt personally undertook today the guidance of NRA toward a new era of business control—a method of management by boards instead of individuals.

In sharp contrast with the still absent Hugh S. Johnson's original swift marshalling of the Blue Eagle emergency battalion, he moved guardedly toward the goal of permanency. There was intent watch for, but no indication of whether the reshaping would be done along more liberal or conservative lines.

Mr. Roosevelt, within a matter of minutes after his return from Hyde Park, N. Y., told newspapermen the process was underway, but that it would be revolutionary rather than sudden. Immediately thereafter he conferred at length with Donald R. Richberg, newly risen to the post of chief co-ordinator of New Deal recovery activities.

The president demonstrated clearly he would disclose the course of his newest business moves only when his plans were in shape.

Will Speak to Nation.

Mr. Roosevelt will talk to the nation again from the White House next Sunday night at 10 p. m., resuming his "fireside" radio broadcasts after a lapse of several months. Although no subject was announced, it generally was expected he would say something of the course of the New Deal.

Asked at his press conference today whether he would answer the recent requests of organized business for a clarification of his policies on balancing NRA and finances, he turned a jest. Then he added a belief that industry should exert more leadership toward the recovery goal.

As for his own anti-depression team, which he once likened to a football eleven with himself at quarterback, Mr. Roosevelt would discuss none of his projected 1934 plays. He remarked with a smile that the squad still seemed to be scoring.

Nor would he comment on the loss of that dynamo of the old first team—Hugh Johnson. The whereabouts of the resigned administrator remained something of a mystery. His friends here thought he was in New York, but no one knew where. At NRA it was said he would be back at his desk tomorrow to wind-up odds and ends before departing October 15.

One of the points most marked about Johnson's quick submission of his resignation last night was the lack of comment by official Washington.

MISSING SCHOOL GIRL'S BODY IS FOUND IN TRUNK

Police Believe Child Was Assaulted By Degenerate

Detroit, Sept. 26.—(P)—Strangled, criminally assaulted and her head crushed by a blow from a hammer, Lillian Gallagher's body was found today, on her 11th birthday, stuffed into a small trunk in an apartment six blocks from the home where she had been missing since Thursday.

The blood stained hammer was found this afternoon in the apartment, which had been occupied since July 10 by a couple registered as Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Goodrich, respectively 25 and 26 years old.

A medical examination established death was caused either by a blow on the skull or by strangulation, and that an assault had been made before she died.

Suspect Released.

Later today a man who answered Goodrich's appearance, was detained briefly in Adrian, Mich., until he established his identity.

With his release, Mr. and Mrs. Goodrich—the former said by police to have been committed to an Ohio asylum after molesting women and girls in Youngstown, O.—became the objectives of a search even more intensive than the one for the child.

A tenant in the apartment building, Miss Gertrude Berg, revealed today that she saw Lillian enter the Goodrich apartment about 6:45 o'clock last Thursday evening, and that she saw two men through the opened door, Lillian, at the time, was selling chances on a punch board for the benefit of her school.

In the Goodrich apartment today, police found numerous pencil sketches. Police said many of them were obscene and that a few pictured a small girl with tears on her face. The name "M. W. Goodrich" was written on a folder enclosing some of the drawings.

In a clothes closet was the punch board.

In the trunk with the body were newspaper clippings telling of the search for the child. Some of them were from papers of Friday.

Clyde Burgess, the janitor, said Goodrich was seen about the apartment house Saturday. Police advanced that as an indication Lillian might have been held a prisoner there many hours, perhaps days, before she was killed.

Burgess said Mrs. Goodrich had been in the building Friday.

Goodrich was released from the Ohio asylum at Lima January 13, 1934, on a writ of habeas corpus. Official officials said he was understood to have returned to Youngstown.

Police said Mr. and Mrs. Goodrich had lived in Detroit since last spring, that Goodrich, a trap drummer, had played with a small orchestra for a while and that he had been a house to house magazine circulation salesman. Mrs. Goodrich, they said, had sold pies, cakes and sandwiches, also house to house.

Lillian's body was in an advanced state of decomposition—a condition that led to its discovery.

The head was bound in a towel, as was also forced into the mouth with a gag. The hands were tied with a heavy cord and the body was doubled up in the trunk.

There was no blood and, while the condition of the body made it difficult to tell just how she died, coroner's assistants said there were marks on the throat that probably were made by tightly clasped fingers.

A bag of candy was found in the room. This, police said, indicated that Lillian might have been lured there instead of knocking at the door with the punch board on which she was selling chances at a school benefit.

None of the other tenants in the building recalled that Lillian had asked them to buy chances and it seemed doubtful that she would have started on the top floor, on which the Goodrich apartment was located.

Lillian's mother and father—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gallagher—and her two sisters and brother appeared to be stunned by the child's fate.

Only Clayton Gallagher, the elder brother, was able to speak.

"If I could get my hands on that fellow, just once," he said.

And then: "I hope she died suddenly; that she wasn't tortured."

PUBLIC STATE OF MIND BAR TO RECOVERY

Frank Knox, Chicago Publisher Claims Farmers Uneasy

Madison, Wis., Sept. 26.—(P)—Frank Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, tonight said the "present state of public mind" is an "absolute bar to recovery."

Speaking before the Dane County Republican Club, Knox took sharp issue with President Roosevelt's Green Bay, Wis., speech, in which the president said confidence had returned to the country.

"The people are consumed with fear lest, in the presence of failure, resort be made in the future to measures more radical than any that have been tried in the past," the Chicago publisher said.

President Wrong.

"The president was wrong in his attitude in his Green Bay speech, and in thinking his has transpired since then," he said.

"Unrest x x x has increased among the farmers to a point where some of the radical legislation, including the infamous Bankhead act, is about to be suspended by executive order."

"The government bond market, reflecting government credit, has steadily weakened."

"Business, measured by every index, is at low level than it was a year ago."

"The number of unemployed has increased, and private financing of business enterprise has shown no improvement."

Knox declared there exists a "state of alarm, bewilderment, and uncertainty which is growing in the public mind daily."

Calling the administration's farm policy "a total failure" Knox declared the increase in the price of farm products "has been wholly due to a national scarcity produced by drought." He said of the NRA: "It is sufficient x x x to point out that after more than one year's trial, more men and women and more families are dependent upon federal relief than when the policy was initiated."

Restoration of confidence, because it affects the volume of credit, is far more essential, Knox said, than increases in the currency.

SLAYER IS GIVEN LIFE SENTENCE

Benton, Ill. Sept. 26.—(P)—Ormel D. Watson of West Frankfort was convicted here today of participation in the slaying of Night Marshal James Pyle at Christopher, Ill., and sentenced to life in the penitentiary.

The trial began Monday and the verdict returned after the jury had been out an hour. Watson was sentenced by Circuit Judge W. Joe Hill.

He is the second person sentenced in the slaying, which occurred the night of July 16, 1933, following an attempted holdup of a lunch room. T. S. Van of East St. Louis was arrested shortly after the slaying, and was sentenced to life imprisonment during the May term of court.

Watson was arrested several weeks ago at Marion. A third man is still being sought in connection with the slaying.

Federal Agents Seek Surgeon In Bremer Kidnaping

Chicago, Sept. 26.—(P)—Melvin H. Purvis, in charge of the Chicago office of the U. S. division of investigation, confirmed reports today that the federal agents are seeking Dr. Joseph P. Moran "for questioning" in the Bremer kidnap case.

Purvis said briefly, "We want Moran. We haven't got him."

Dr. Moran is a paroled convict, released on December 15, 1931, from Illinois state penitentiary at Joliet, Ill. He was sentenced to prison from La Salle county in November, 1928, after his conviction on a charge of performing an abortion.

"He is wanted for questioning in connection with the kidnaping of Edward Bremer," the chief of the Chicago federal agents said. "I can't discuss his suspected connection with the case."

Bremer, St. Paul banker and brewer, was abducted in January, 1934, and released on the payment of $100,000 ransom. Alvin Karpis and Arthur "Doc" Barker, southwestern gunmen, have been sought as the principals in the case, still unsolved.

Since his parole, Dr. Moran, a young man, had practiced in Chicago. In La Salle, Ill., where he had a practice at the time of his trial and conviction, he had the reputation of a skilled surgeon.

He was first paroled on April 7, 1930, but was returned to prison in January of 1931 as a violator. In the meantime, he had established a practice in Bureau county.

La Salle county officials knew of the federal agents' search for the surgeon. It has been under way for about three months.

Unable to locate Dr. Moran, the federal agents, it was said, have discovered his bank deposits and have learned the identity of a woman who was frequently his companion. The physicians' wife obtained a divorce at the time of his conviction on the criminal charge.

PUBLIC STATE OF MIND BAR TO RECOVERY

Frank Knox, Chicago Publisher Claims Farmers Uneasy

Madison, Wis., Sept. 26.—(P)—Frank Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, tonight said the "present state of public mind" is an "absolute bar to recovery."

NEGRO PRISONER SHOT AND KILLED

Savannah, Ga., Sept. 26.—(P)—An unidentified negro prisoner was shot to death and nine others escaped from a convict truck today after overpowering two guards.

County officers tonight said they had been so busy looking for the nine live ones they had made no effort to identify the dead man nor learn the details of his death.

Five prisoners who made no attempt to escape from the truck said the vehicle was carrying them to the site of a road building project on the Augusta highway several miles from Savannah when the ten men suddenly seized the guard on the rear of the truck and overpowered him.

They then seized the guard on the front of the truck, hurled him to the ground and obtained his weapons.

NYE MAY TAKE ALL PROFITS OUT OF WARS

North Dakota Senator Favors Confiscatory Income Taxes

Washington, Sept. 26.—(P)—Senator Nye of North Dakota, chairman of the Senate munitions investigating committee, will press in the next Congress a bill for confiscatory federal income taxes in time of war.

Making this announcement to newspapermen today, Nye said he would fight for this legislation as his reply to assertions of munitions manufacturers and militarists that the government should not nationalize the munitions industry. He intended, he said, to entirely strip war of its profits.

His bill, Nye said, would provide for double income taxes on incomes below $10,000 and taxes of 98 per cent on all incomes above that figure to become effective on the day that the United States declared war. He said the measure would apply indiscriminately against individuals, companies and corporations.

"The country is with us on this," he declared as he interrupted a conference with William John, British member of Parliament, to point to more than 10,000 telegrams, cablegrams, letters and post cards from people and organizations in this country and abroad, urging his committee to go the limit in describing the activities of the munitions industry.

John, one of the whips of the British labor party, called on Nye to discuss the American investigation. He said British public opinion had been greatly stirred by revelations in the United States. The British Parliament, he predicted, would order such an inquiry.

Later, addressing a delegation of advocates of peace who called at his office to report progress in enlisting all congressional candidates through the country in making definite commitments on curbing the munitions industry, Nye said:

"Only by learning the whole truth, and then taking steps to curb the whole sordid business can we remove the prospect of war."

The Senator said his committee will need an additional appropriation from Congress next winter to complete its investigation.

He declared himself hopeful it would be granted, despite what he said was tremendous pressure from munitions makers to throttle the inquiry.

Meanwhile something of a mystery surrounded the five cables obtained from the I. Du Pont de Nemours file. They were kept out of the committee record two weeks ago because it was feared they might cause "destruction of life and property" in Argentina if made public.

Nye said these cables were given to the state department Monday. Ambassador Felipe A. Espil, who called at the state department several times today said he had not yet received the mysterious messages.

He promptly transmitted them to Buenos Aires when they are delivered.

From another quarter today came confirmation that the call of Lamont DuPont of the DuPont interests at the state department yesterday was to complain that the inquiry had seriously affected his company's business abroad.

Venezuela today joined the growing list of nations objecting to statements made to the committee in testimony or in evidence. Dr. Pedro M. Araya, Venezuelan minister here, sharply denounced that Venezuelan officials personally profited by any commissions on arms transactions. He said all such discounts went into the federal treasury.

FLOOD WATERS ARE SUBSIDING IN TWO STATES

Minnesota And Wisconsin Streams Overflow After Heavy Rains

St. Paul, Sept. 26.—(P)—Flood waters of small streams in southeastern Minnesota and southwestern Wisconsin, which overflowed Tuesday following several days of heavy rainfall, subsided tonight, but the Mississippi river near Winona continued to rise at the rate of about one half inch per hour.

A 60-foot dam at the site of the Minneapolis nine-foot channel dam was built by V. C. Funk, resident engineer for the war department, to be definitely out of danger of being flooded.

Temperatures dipped sharply downward with traces of snow at Bemidji, Minn., in the north, Willmar, in the west, and Marshall in the southwestern part of the state.

Many unemployed were given jobs repairing bridges and highways in the Lake, Wis., vicinity where officials estimated the storm damage exceeded $100,000.

In Wisconsin the Burlington road near Pepin and the Milwaukee road at Lake City and Wabash reported washouts. They were repaired and trains operated on schedule today. A 40 foot steel bridge was carried 40 feet down stream in Buffalo county by the swollen Waumandee creek and in La Crosse county, near Monroe, the Coulee Creek washed out a 16 foot steel bridge.

WOMAN SENTENCED

Dedham, Mass., Sept. 26.—(P)—Mrs. Norma Brighton Miller, 19, former clerkman's daughter and bride of a convicted machine gun slayer, was sentenced today to one year in the house of correction on an indictment. The other two indictments were filed. She was convicted as an accessory in the murder of two policemen and the robbery of a bank.

Norma is the bride of Murton Miller, who with his brother, Irving, and Abraham Faber, was convicted in the slaying of one of the policemen. They now are awaiting sentence.

Norma will be eligible for parole in six months. Judge Nelson P. Brown said when that time came, he felt she should be paroled.

Woman Riding In Chicago Bus Is Killed By Stone

Chicago, Sept. 26.—(P)—The first death in Chicago's forty day old bus strike occurred tonight after a series of sporadic outbreaks of violence during the day and an alleged confession of a hired shooting of a bus dispatcher.

Mrs. Mary Kennard, 65, a resident of the Hyde Park hotel, died in her room after apparently resulting from a blow on the head by a stone thrown through a bus window on the outer drive along Lake Michigan.

Two other passengers were hurt during the day, one when a bomb exploded on the upper deck of a bus and another when a brick was hurled through a window.

One of three men held by police as members of a gang of five who attacked a bus dispatcher this morning confessed, police said, he was paid $15 by "a union official" to shoot the dispatcher.

The other two admitted taking part in the attack, police said, after being named in an alleged confession by Alex Semple, 39, dated he had led the group and fired the shots which wounded James Kelly, 49, non-striking employee of the Chicago Motor Coach company, in the abdomen and thigh.

Police said both Semple and John Bretschneider told them a man named "Brown" had given Semple $10 to assault Kelly, but they each associated "Brown" with a different union. Edward Brandell, 34, was the third suspect arrested.

Kelly said he could not identify the suspects.

In another affair police said they believed was associated with the bus strike, Carl Olson, 32, was wounded three times by police and later arrested as he fled after a squad car had stopped an automobile from which the officers said they had seen a brick thrown through a window. The window was in a pool room owned by Carl Schuler, a working bus driver.

Two men who were in the automobile were arrested. They were Harry Ghene, 28, and Sam Orsini, 28, who police said are striking bus drivers.

RUSSIA WOULD RESUME ARMS CONFERENCE

Surprise Move Stirs Hornets Nest At League Meet

Geneva, Sept. 26.—(P)—Russia's surprise move to get the council of the league of nations to strike a balance on disarmament apparently had stirred up a hornet's nest tonight.

Because of the "dynamite" contained in foreign commissar Maxim Litvinov's request that the council obtain a report on whether the disarmament conference can be successfully resumed, efforts were made tonight to induce him to withdraw it.

Statements in some quarters were known to be apprehensive lest a report from Arthur Henderson, president of the disarmament conference, might blame failure of the conference on Germany's withdrawal.

This, it was explained, inevitably would raise the question of the alleged remaining of Germany in violation of the treaty of Versailles—a question which England for one is desirous of avoiding.

Litvinov's proposal would throw the whole question of disarmament back into the lap of the league council, which they would be responsible for choosing the path leading to disarmament. The proposal was contained in a letter to Richard Snodgrass, president of the league assembly.

The Russian communication was received at a time when the steering committee of the league sought means of bringing to a conclusion the war between Paraguay and Bolivia.

The political committee of the league today recommended unanimously that Afghanistan be admitted to membership.

The advent of the United States and Russia into the international labor organization was hailed by several delegates to the governing body.

TRANSFERS PATIENTS

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 26.—(P)—The Public Welfare Department today announced that 45 patients had been transferred from the Illinois Security hospital at Chester to the Civil State hospitals, under authority of recent prison reform laws.

All the men have served their maximum sentences and were found by psychiatrists to be treatable.

BRUNO HAUPTMANN IS INDICTED FOR EXTORTING RANSOM

Claims Lindbergh Kidnaping Planned In N. J. Speakeasy

New York, Sept. 26.—(P)—A former Welfare Island prisoner who told detectives he had heard the Lindbergh baby kidnaping planned in a New Jersey speakeasy prior to his arrest was rushed to police headquarters tonight by detectives who said they expected another "important break" in the case in the next 24 hours.

The prisoner was reported to have told the detectives the two men he heard plotting the crime were named "Bauer and Kaupman." He now believes the man he knew as Kaupman was actually Bruno Richard Hauptmann, indicted today for extortion in connection with the case.

Detectives identified the man being questioned as George Fitzgerald, 50, and homeless. He was arrested in a park tonight for soliciting alms.

When he told his story, he was hurried from night court to police headquarters where he was caged with police officials.

KIDNAP SUSPECT WILL STAND BY FIRST STORY

Says Isadore Fisch Gave Him Money

By Ben Robertson, Associated Press Staff Writer.

New York, Sept. 26.—(P)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann will stand by his story that Isadore Fisch, a tubercular further now dead, gave him the Lindbergh ransom money for safekeeping, it was learned from intimate friends tonight.

"It is a good explanation," they reiterated and they still express their firm belief that the German carpenter is an innocent man.

They hold the horde of federal and state investigators have built up their entire case "by talk" and "by circumstantial inference" about the fact which Hauptmann has admitted from the first—that money was found in his garage in the Bronx.

Reply to Accusations.

To accusations made by these investigators, they reply:

1.—The belief the author of the ransom notes was a German does not implicate Hauptmann any more than it does any of a million German-Americans living in the United States.

2.—That the ladder used to reach the baby's nursery was the work of a skilled carpenter does not implicate Hauptmann any more than it does thousands of German-American carpenters. Carpentry is a trade at which many German-Americans are specially talented.

3.—The defense refuses to accept the word of the investigators that the ladder in the ladder has been traced to a Bronx lumber yard where Hauptmann once worked. In one account, they state, the ladder was said to have come from Wisconsin; in another it was reported traced to a mill in California where it was said to have been sawed on a certain day by a particular saw. It does not follow, they contend, even if the ladder were traced to the Bronx yard that Hauptmann had anything to do with making it into a ladder.

4.—What if nails of a certain groove were found in the ladder and at the Hauptmann home? Friends say nails of this groove are turned out by the mill in America and they venture to find similar nails in almost any building.

5.—The print of the shoe sole or wrapped foot outside the Lindbergh home might be "similar" to that of "ten million American men."

6.—Handwriting experts, they contend, have appeared in many court cases on both the sides of the prosecution and the defense and have disagreed on the similarity of writing.

7.—They deny that Hauptmann was anywhere near Hopewell, N. J., at any time even approximately near the time of the kidnaping.

8.—An automobile of the same make, model and color of Hauptmann's said to have been seen near Hopewell, could just as easily have been seen in any town in the state on that day, they say.

9.—It has not been proved, they contend, that Hauptmann limped and used a cane shortly after the time of the kidnaping. The doctor who 10 months later treated Hauptmann's phlebitis has stated the inflammation might or might not have been caused by a sprain or fracture.

10.—That the kidnaper and the recipient of the ransom were one and the same is a theory Hauptmann's friends are not considering. They believe the money came from Fisch.

11.—They ask incredulously how a taxi driver after 30 months can still identify a casual stranger who gave him $1 to deliver to "Jasie" at a time when "Jasie" was not well known.

12.—That "Jasie" dealt with a man with a German accent no more indicates Hauptmann than it does thousands of others, a German accent being a common one in New York.

SEARCHERS FIND MORE MONEY AND GUN IN GARAGE

Col. Chas. Lindbergh Is Witness Before Grand Jury

(Copyright, 1934, By The Associated Press.)

New York, Sept. 26.—(P)—Bruno Hauptmann was indicted today for extorting $50,000 ransom from Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, soon after the famous "flier" testified before the Bronx county grand jury against the alien ex-convict linked by damning evidence to the actual abduction and death of the child.

Swiftly, dramatically, this climactic day brought forth these startling disclosures:

More ransom bills and a small calibre revolver, loaded, were found cached in secret cubbyholes of Hauptmann's garage.

With Lindbergh's direct entrance into the case against Hauptmann, the steel-like nerves of the prisoner began to crumble.

The quiet qualities dominant since his arrest a week ago seemed to be vanishing. Hauptmann went almost all night in his jail cell. Throughout the day, there was uneasiness where before was only tight-lipped stolidness.

It seemed possible the kidnap-killer suspect would be confronted by the dead baby's father.

But that did not come today.

Lindbergh, accompanied by H. Norman Schwarzkopf, chief of the New Jersey state police, sped to the Bronx court house from the Dwight Morrow home in Englewood, N. J., his wife, Anne Morrow Lindbergh, remained at home with their second son, Jon.

With hundreds of curious crowded about the courthouse, Lindbergh, hatless as usual, dressed in a grey suit, no vest, his tie flowing in the breeze—hurried into the grand jury room.

He was there 17 minutes—giving the final testimony for the indictment of Hauptmann as the man who wrote the ransom notes, the man who guided the payment of the ransom, the man who made a promise to return the baby alive.

This was a promise that could not be kept—for the baby was already dead.

Coincident with the finding of the money and revolver, there were two further developments:

1. Chief Inspector John J. Sullivan disclosed he was seeking information about a man possessing a huge roll of bills who chartered a tug to catch the north German Lloyd liner Columbus down the bay when it sailed Saturday.

2. J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the bureau of investigation of the department of justice, indicated in Washington he looked for further arrests in the case.

Linked to the Columbus sailing, Sullivan cabled Detective Arthur Johnson of New York information reported to have a highly important connection with the case. Johnson who has been in Europe on another case, was instructed to proceed to an unnamed German city to await further orders.

It was at once conjectured whether Johnson was sent to Bremen, where the Columbus is due to dock, or to Leipzig, where the body of Isadore Fisch is buried. Fisch was a close friend of Hauptmann. The latter has declared steadfastly since his arrest that the ransom bills were found in Fisch's possessions, left at the Hauptmann home when he sailed for Germany. Fisch died suddenly in Leipzig. It has been thought possible his body would be exhumed to determine if he met a violent death.

Department of justice agents have assured that "by no means" are they through with the Fisch-Hauptmann connection.

The new evidence against Hauptmann in the Bronx was found as Lindbergh was giving his testimony to the grand jurors.

Squads of carpenters and police found in the garage a loose two-by-four set in the side supports. Holes had been drilled in the board, five of them. In each was stuck a wad of bills—$840 in all. Glistering in a little cubbyhole below the two-by-four, the police found the revolver, evidence of German make.

With this discovery, the investigators have located $14,500 in ransom bills from the time of how many of the bills were passed by Hauptmann since that April night in 1932 when Dr. John P. Condon—"Jasie," the intermediary paid over the $50,000 ransom in St. Raymond's cemetery in the Bronx.

The bills found today were taken at once to the office of District Attorney Samuel Foley of the Bronx. After checking them with the list of ransom notes, he said:

"Every one of the bills is a Lindbergh certificate."

Notified of the latest discovery Hauptmann admitted to possession of the bills and said the revolver was given to him by a friend.

Too Much Work

Any idea that criminals choose their careers that they may avoid hard work might be dispelled by the job which robbers tackled at Eldorado, Ill., last Friday night. They stole a $500-pound safe from the Western Union office, hauled it to a corn field and tried to open it. They did not succeed in getting at the $12,93
the safe contained.

But they certainly tried. When the safe was found, the hinges had been chiseled off, the combination was ripped away, and the handle was twisted from its fastenings. The thieves damaged the safe more than its contents could be worth and then failed to get the cash.

It was a night's hard work, carried on under difficulties. The robbers were not seeking to avoid labor, or they would have left the safe in the office. These men were out to steal for the sake of stealing. They had the criminal intent, but they lacked the ability to measure the chances for success against the labor involved.

We Object

Senator Dill of Washington has proposed that radio stations establish their own news-gathering agencies.
Why we cannot conceive.

Senator Schall of Minnesota has wired President Roosevelt asking that he denounce Dill's idea. Schall sees in it the very thing the press most fears, a government-controlled news agency, with radio as the means of distributing the news to the people.

Radio news is often very unreliable.
Jacksonville suffered more at the time of the storm from exaggerated radio reports than from the actual damage in that the radio broadcasted news of hundreds of deaths. That report caused great anxiety, and when relatives from outside found telephone communications cut off they were more anxious than before.

Hence if radio sets out to gather its own news, the results might be rather amazing, if the job of reporting done for the storm here is a fair sample.
The press has reliable sources of news, maintains a staff of reporters whose business it is to get the facts, and is held legally responsible for the news it publishes. Evidently radio is not legally bound to be accurate.

It is true the press occasionally criticizes government, and that may be the reason why some Senators and others would like to see a competitor that could be controlled. But without a free press, the people would soon find their liberties disappearing, and without accurate and abundant news on all subjects, they would also soon see the decline of popular intelligence and the high standard of education of which this nation has always been proud.

The Race For The Cup

Now that the race for the sailing yacht challenge trophy is ended and the cup is safe on the American mantel for another year, thoughtful people are wondering if it has all been worth while. T. O. M. Sopwith indicated that the race had not promoted international good will, because he felt that he had not been given fair treatment.

When his protest of Saturday's race was ignored merely because he did not make it soon enough, the Englishman became rather fed up with the whole affair, and he remained that way thru the remainder of the series.

The fact that the Americans have won 44 of the 49 races during the fifteen years the cup has stayed on this side of the Atlantic is enough to prove the Yankees the best sailors. It is the technical rules of the race that cause the bad feeling. There is always a question of how much canvass can be unfurled, how the boats are to be handled in case one or the other does this or that, and a multitude of other details that act as a swarm of mosquitoes to aggravate the contestants.

Both boats ended the final race with their protest flags flying. Each had claimed violation of the rules on the other. It is unfortunate that such international events call for such petty arguments. Such contests usually end with prejudices of nationalities greater than before. The British opinion of us is not made any better, and vice versa. International junkheon clubs do more to strengthen good will than international sporting events.

Russia Sells Out

The sale of Russia's share of the Chinese Eastern railway to Manchukuo has been completed, and thus one of the principal menaces to peace in the orient has been removed.
Russia has sold her interest rather than waste human lives defending it against Japanese encroachment.

The sale price is said to be $40,800-000. The state of Manchukuo will also pay $8,700,000 to Russian employees of the road, who will be discharged and sent back to their native country. Eighty Russians who have been imprisoned in recent weeks in the campaign to force Russia to sell out, will be released and also sent home.

The jointly owned road has been a bone of contention for years. But China had no way of forcing her partner to sell, even had she been able to finance the deal. However, with the creation of the puppet state of Manchukuo by Japan and the enfranchisement of that country into the controversy, negotiations moved much faster.

The two score million dollars looked good to the Soviets, and as they could no longer control the road anyway, they were willing to step out of the picture. However, they had to forfeit a commercial outlet across the rich state of Manchuria, which will be some loss, as Siberia has all too few shipping outlets.

With the sale of the road the rest of the world heaves a sigh of relief.
Russia and Japan will have one less point of dispute, and that is the most important one. Excuses for trouble, if either nation wants them, will have to be found elsewhere.

The Swiss Play Safe

Switzerland, for many years a neutral nation and home of the League of Nations, intends to keep her neutrality even if she has to keep her citizens out of foreign military service, one of their favorite occupations. The Swiss have always been distinguished as soldiers, and they have been for hire to the nation willing to pay their price.

Sometimes they have paid with their lives, as did the Swiss Guards of the Tuilleries palace during the French Revolution. It was behind the stalwart Swiss that French royalty made its last stand, and it was the palace guards who bore the brunt of mob fury.

The Swiss have served in nearly every European war for more than a century, but their own country has been at peace. They are also good peace-time guards, and they are seen in the uniform of many countries.
They are best known today as guards
of the Vatican in Rome.

But the Swiss will not be encouraged to hire as special police to serve during the Saar plebiscite. The government has issued a warning that the citizens should not endanger the country's neutrality by hiring to the League of Nations for this service.

The Saar is governed by a League Commission, planning to hold an election in January to determine final disposition of that region. Both France and Germany are interested in the outcome, and already there have been rumors of violence. The League wants more police to insure a fair election, but they won't come from Switzerland.

SO THEY SAY

This much I am sure of: That, unsuccessful as I am, I can attend to my own affairs better than any bureaucrat in Washington can attend to them for me.

—Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher.

Badly chosen color in dress or for home decoration not only reflects an uneducated color sense, but the character of the possessor. Negative persons do not throw off a strong color vibration.

—Natalie Kalmus, motion picture
director.

I would rather vote for a man in a graveyard with a good respectable name than the rest of these pudding-heads who are running around dead and won't lie down.

—Senator-elect Theodore G. Bilbo of Mississippi.

Don't Let Them Spoof You
on Taxes . . . They'll Be Higher—and Plenty . . .
And the Little Guy'll Pay
and Pay . . . New Market
Regulation Chief Fortifies
Himself . . . Some Notes
About Town.

BY WILLIS THORNTON
Journal and Courier Washington Correspondent

Washington—Two kinds of laughter followed the recent statement of Senator Pat Harrison of the Finance Committee that probably tax increases would not be necessary this winter.

The first kind was open and jolly laughter, coming from those who remembered that congressional elections are in the offing, and that statements on taxation at such times are not to be taken seriously.

The second kind was hollow and mirthless, and came from those who realize that "nothing is certain but death and higher taxes," and that if they don't come this winter then they are all the more certain to come later, and to be higher the later they come.

This second group is growing. It doesn't consist only of conservatives who resent the continued pouring out of federal tax money. It consists of those who see no way out of spending the money, but who begin to mistrust whether a congress elected on lavish promises of continued spending will be willing to face the music later and go back to those same voters with the bill.

The Blow Is Coming
Former Budget Director Lew Douglas hasn't opened his mouth since leaving his post (he is the soul of personal loyalty), but it is believed that what worried him was not so much the spending, but the lack of willingness on the part of congress to provide means of paying the bills.

One of the best tax authorities in Washington puts it this way:

"The average 'well-off man'—that is,
I mean the man who has a job, makes a fair wage or salary of say $2500 or $3000 a year or a little better—isn't the 'soak-the-rich' siren song.

"He figures somebody else will pay the bill—not he. And that's just where he is mistaken. He is just the fellow who's going to pay it."

Then You'll Hear How
"The figures (and they're too complicated and unpleasant to make good campaign speeches) show that if all the big incomes were taxed right up to the bill, it wouldn't produce the kind of money it's going to take to pay this bill.

"When congress really resolves to roll up its sleeves and tackle this tax problem, you'll see the exemptions cut down from $2500 for married people to $1000, and from $1000 to $500 for unmarried."

"Then listen for the wail that will go up from people who never peeped at government spending before."

While the Treasury's "little brains trust" gets its tax plans ready for the president, observers are noting the presence of Senators David Reed and Daniel O. Hastings (Republican stalwarts) and Couzens and LaFollette (high tax advocates) on the Finance Committee.

None of these is joining the Harrison carol of "no higher taxes." By December, if Senator Harrison is still singing it, he'll be doing a solo.

Making Himself Solid

One of the reasons Joseph Kennedy of the Stock Markets and Securities Commission is standing firm for careful regulation is that he hasn't been confirmed yet by the Senate. When it gets around to that it will be nice to have a record of firmness to show, offsetting the cry of "Ex-Tory" that is apt to be raised. . . . Another of the former Hoover crew who has settled down in Washington is Julius Klein, the Commerce Department radio star who used to fall (in 1932) how properly was just around the corner.

He's now head of a firm of tax lawyers and code experts. . . . The mail study in history: A hundred fifty years ago the Taylor mansion, or Octagon House, was one of the most luxurious, magnificent, and impressive homes in a new country. Soon now it will be occupied by a branch of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration. . . . The Department of Agriculture has its experts hard at work on plants that require little water.
That's still another attack on the drought situation. It's developing new plants, both fruit-bearing and for erosion control, which will grow in territory where there isn't, and isn't going to be, much water. . . .

The government is just finishing the buying of more than 1000 acres of land along the magnificent parkway that leads from Washington to Mt. Vernon. This road is to be one of the show places of the country, with extensive parking and landscaping on both sides.

New York—Well the boat docked in time to rush to see the East-West polo game, and it was a real game, and hats off to the eastern kids. For they played a great game and deserved to win. 14 to 13, you can't get it much closer than that. Our team did mighty nobly. And the fine thing about it there was no protests, and no hard feelings. Our boys just got to go home, and dig up a couple more goals by next year. Yours, WILL.

Work is being started this week on the drilling of two deep wells in this county to supply water in times of drouth. The labor is being supplied by the National Re-employment

The well is expected to be 150 feet deep. At Nortonville the well will be drilled in the village square and will be 100 feet deep.

Farmers residing in the surrounding communities will be permitted to draw water from these wells when they run short on their farms. The

Waite Hoyt, Veteran Pitcher Holds Cardinals to Two Hits And Pirates Win Game 3-2

St. Louis, Sept. 26.—(P)—Waite Hoyt, a veteran of the baseball wars, who was a world series star when Paul Dean was a barefoot boy in the southern cotton fields, prevented the St. Louis Cardinals from moving into first place in the National League pennant race today.

Hoyt, who is staging a remarkable comeback with the Pittsburgh Pirates, held the Cardinals to two hits, both singles by Johnny Rothrock, and shut them out 3 to 0. Young Dean, his starting mound opponent, gave six hits in six innings and retired in favor of a pinch-hitter.

As Bill Terry's New York Giants suffered another defeat at the hands of Philadelphia, the Cardinals remained one game behind last year's world champions.

The standings show the Cardinals tied with New York on the losing side of the league and two victories behind on the won side. The Red Birds still can gain a tie for the championship by winning their remaining four games, all with the Cincinnati Reds.

Even if the Giants win their two with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

A wild streak and a home run by Floyd (Arky) Vaughan caused the downfall of Dean, whose last previous start was a no-hit victory over Brooklyn.

Dean walked Hoyt and Lloyd Waner.

with 4.0 out in the third inning and Jensen angled left, scoring Hoyt. In the sixth, with two out, Paul Waner picked on a half-speed ball and singled to center and Vaughan hit to the roof of the right-field pavilion, scoring behind him.

After Dean retired for a pinch-hitter in the home half of the sixth, Wild Bill Hallahan hurled three hitless innings, turning back the Pirates in order.

Only two Cardinals advanced as far as second base and not until the ninth did they have two men on the runways. Then Crawford, batting for Hallahan, was safe on Vaughan's fumble and Healey, running for Crawford, reached second on Martin's infield out.

It was the 11th defeat for Paul Dean, as compared with 18 victories, in his freshman year in the major leagues.

The game attracted 8,500 customers.

YANKEES TROUNCE ATHLETICS 4 TO 3

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 26.—(P)—An error by Pinkey Higgins in the eleventh inning gave the New York Yankees a 4 to 3 decision over the Philadelphia Athletics and a sweep of the two-game series today.

With the score deadlocked, Ben Chapman drew a walk in the eleventh and sped around to third when Myril Hoag dropped a single in right field. Higgins, taking the relay from Roger Cramer, threw wild to second in an attempt to catch Hoag and Chapman came home with the deciding run.

Charles Davenport, recalled from Newark last week, pitched the full game for the Yankees, holding the Athletics to nine hits. The Yankees nine safe blows included a homer by George Selkirk.

The triumph gave the Yankees the season's series 15 to 7.

ROUTT AND J. H. S. BATTLE IN RAIN

Teams Polish Up Plays for Games This Week-end; In Scrimmage on High School Field—Quincy Academy to Play Rockets Friday.

Quincy and Jacksonville High, who will take on opponents this week-end, polished up for their contests last night in a scrimmage on the high school field despite a rain and a well soaked gridiron. The Rockets preparing for their game with Quincy Academy here Friday night under the Illinois College lights, and the Crimsons for their tough battle at Beardstown Saturday afternoon.

Neither line-up was at its full strength for the scrimmage, and no effort was made to mark up yardage gained. The two coaches alternated their teams on offense and defense, the Crimsons taking the offensive first and then testing out their defense toward the close of the practice.

One thing became apparent particularly in the J.H.S. line-up. There are going to be some changes made, and one of them probably will elevate Warren Breeding to the first string center position. Breeding handled a slippery ball last night with only one or two bobbles after the other center "Pop" Ward, made several miscues. Still another change may move Willis Franks into a starting first team end position, replacing Harlan Byre.

Quincy did not use its full backfield strength until the close of the session when Corbett entered the fray to do a little ball carrying and attempt a few passes. Bob Ring played the fullback position most of the time, and gave a lot of promise. He is fast and runs low, and may be able to win a variety berth before long. Profit, regular end, also was out of the line-up, recovering from a slight injury, Simonds filling in on the wing.

The Crimsons were without Ted Wainwright, fullback, and Bob Jaeger, guard. The Crimsons backs had some trouble hanging onto the slippery oval at the start of the scrimmage, but soon acquired the knack of squeezing the ball tightly enough to prevent it from slipping away.

J.H.S. attack failed to move as well as was hoped in view of the nearness of the Beardstown game, but at times the backs were able to get through the Routt line for substantial gains.

Despite the oozy leather, Wiley Shawen demonstrated that his attempts at forward passes last week in the industry game were the passes of an inexperienced tosser, by completing several of them against Routt.

When the Rockets took the ball, they found their power plays were being piled up on the line of scrimmage, and that their reverses and passes were not working as well as they did against Trinity. However, several times Routt backs got away for what would have been touchdown runs, had not the play been stopped.

Coach Walker started with McDonnell and Eyre at ends, Melvin and Wicks at tackles, Hamilton and Parks, guards, Ward, center, DeWitt, quarterback, Davis and Shawen, halfbacks, and Reason, fullback. Dick Benson replaced Reason in the fullback job. Breeding took over the center work, and Franks replaced Eyre at end.

The Routt line was made up of Simonds and McGinnis, ends, Wainwright and Lacy, tackles, Tapock and R. Lonergan, guards, V. Lonergan, center, Buoy, quarter, Lawrence and Torricelli, halfbacks, and Ring fullback. Profit went in at end for a few plays. Pritchett replaced Wainwright, and Corbett ran a few plays from the fullback position.

An almost veteran line, with Bob Miller and Roy Colin, ends; Abe Pedurris and Mefford Kurtz, tackles; Willis Munger and Ford, guards, and Louis Davis, center, has been in front of this backfield for a week.

Coaches Van Meter and Nusspicken last night reached a stage in their preparations whether they have only two more plays to teach the squad of 33 boys who are reporting nightly. Additional plays were given out last night, and more will be given after the opening game with North Central.

The Blueboys may take the field with an entirely new backfield. Coach Nusspicken has been working on a combination of Mangieri, fullback, Stucka and Spuehr, halfbacks, and Donat, quarterback, for the past week, while Watts and Ray Smith are recuperating from injuries sustained in scrimmage.

NEW VOLUME RECALLS MORGAN
COUNTY'S RAILROAD HISTORY

Morgan county's contribution to early day transportation in Illinois is prominently recalled in the Illinois Central's "Trails to Rails," a booklet published recently for public distribution. The booklet is illustrated by a number of photographs and drawings, among them "Disputing the Right-of-Way—an exciting moment on Illinois pioneer railroad, the Northern Cross, between Meredosia and Springfield." The picture is from an old etching that appeared in Pictorial American Monthly, July, 1879. It shows the train crew engaged in driving cattle from the track, with a bull in hot pursuit of the engineer.

The Illinois Central sent a large supply of the booklets to school officials here and these are being distributed in the schools.

Regarding the old Northern Cross, the state's first steam railroad, the author of "Trails to Rails" said:

This 24-mile railroad—the first steam railroad in Illinois—was a part of the Northern Cross project. The completed portion extended from the Illinois River at Meredosia to Jacksonville. It was crudely built of wooden rails upon which thin straps of iron were spiked.

Birthplace of Railroads

Meredosia, in Morgan County, holds the proud distinction of being the birthplace of steam railway transportation in Illinois. Here, in the spring of 1837 occurred the ground-breaking ceremony which signalled the commencement of this pioneer railroad. Construction proceeded slowly toward Jacksonville. The first rail was laid at Meredosia on May 9, 1838.

The first locomotive ever built for an Illinois railroad was shipped from the East by water in the summer of 1838. After many weeks of anxious waiting the engine was reported "lost in transit." There is no record that it ever turned up or that the mystery surrounding its strange disappearance was ever solved.

The first locomotive ever to turn a wheel in Illinois was the "Rogers," built in Paterson, N. J., in the same summer and shipped from New York to New Orleans by sailing vessel, thence by steamboat or barge up the Mississippi and Illinois rivers to Meredosia.

The "Rogers" was a mere toy compared with the powerful giants of today. It had but one set of driving wheels two feet in diameter, and two sets of smaller wheels in front. There was no closed cab, no whistle, no spark arrester, no cow catcher, no bell. On its first run a few miles out of Meredosia, on November 8, 1838, the townspeople "could not understand its power. What made the wheels go round was a mystery they could not solve, and not a few were ready to award some supernatural power to the smoking monster."

Booth to Morgan City

Regular train service between Meredosia and Morgan City, a distance of twelve miles, was inaugurated on July 8, 1839, but not without the strenuous opposition of the stage coach line which paralleled the route. The railway company announced that the train would include "pleasure cars" for passengers as well as "burden cars" for freight shipments. The train tried to make the 12-mile run, with stops, in two hours. At Morgan City a connection was made with the stage coach line to Jacksonville, and in advertising the service the company called attention to the fact that the entire 24-mile trip by rail and stage between Meredosia and Jacksonville was performed in daylight.

By January 1, 1840, the railroad had reached Jacksonville, where it remained for more than two years following the collapse of the internal improvement project which virtually bankrupted the state government. In the spring of 1842 sufficient funds were obtained to extend the road to Springfield. The arrival of the first train at Springfield on May 13, 1842, was the signal for an enthusiastic celebration. One old settler who brought his family to the railroad to see the train go by expressed the fear that if the locomotive ever ran near his farm his cows would stop giving milk.

32 Miles in 2 Hours

According to a local newspaper, "the cars ran from Jacksonville, 32 miles, in two hours and eight minutes, including stoppages." The newspaper expressed the optimistic belief that "the distance could be passed over in an hour and a half." A traveler over this road in 1842 he recalled that grass and weeds covered the rails and caused the engine's wheels to slip. At one place the passengers were called upon to "pitch in" and help the crew carry buckets of water from a creek to fill the engine tank.

The first attempt to operate a steam railroad in Illinois could hardly be called a success. Accidents were of common occurrence. The engine frequently left the track and toppled over into the ditch. Finally, after a series of misfortunes, mule power was substituted and the only locomotive then in use was sold. The new owner fitted the engine with wide tires and attempted to run it on the public roads or across the prairies. The engine thus equipped is said to have made a trip between Springfield and Alton, but not without the frequent aid of a strong yoke of oxen. Some persons, observing the tracks of this strange contrivance, were so mystified that they trailed them some distance across country to ascertain what kind of a juggernaut had visited their community. Their curiosity was satisfied when they came upon the engine, abandoned by its discouraged owner. The Northern Cross Railroad, which had cost the state a million dollars, was finally auctioned off in 1847 for $21,500.

In 1837, the same year the ground was broken for the Northern Cross Railroad, two other short lines were built in Illinois. One of these, known as Charles Collins' railroad, extended four miles out of Naples, on the Illinois river. The other, built by former Governor John Reynolds and associates and known as the Coal-Mine Bluff Railroad, extended from Illinestown (now East St. Louis) to a coal mine on the Mississippi bluff, about six miles distant.

Both Collins' and Reynolds' roads were crudely built of wooden rails without strap iron, and were operated by horse or mule power. Neither of them was operated on a set schedule, neither was a public carrier of passengers or freight.

Jerseyville Plans
Route 110 Ceremony

Jerseyville—Preparations are nearing completion for the official opening of state bond issue route number 110 into the City of Jerseyville. The committees named by the City of Jerseyville and the Chamber of Commerce are cooperating in formulating plans for the occasion. The date of the opening will be Sunday afternoon, Sept. 30, at 2:30 o'clock.

According to the present plans, the parade will form on East Arch street at the City hall and will move through the business district along a route yet to be determined. The Jerseyville City band in trucks will head the parade and the musical organization will be followed by cars bearing officials of the State Highway Department, City of Jerseyville, Chamber of Commerce and others.

All citizens are being invited to participate in the demonstration. The merchants of Jerseyville have agreed to decorate their places of business, utilizing flags.

From the City hall the parade will take its way through the business district to the junction of Route 110 with the city pavement near the Evangelical church. At that point the official ceremonies will take place.

Ribbon Will Be Slashed
After the speech making and severing of the ribbon the parade will proceed eastward over Route 110 as far as the Village of Piasa. Other villages en route to Piasa have been asked to participate in the demonstration, and Medora and Fidelity will join in the event as well as Piasa.

The general plan calls for the decoration of the park near the junction of the new route with the city pavement. Flags will be used in carrying out this idea.

The parade from Jerseyville to Piasa will be escorted by state police.

Hugh Green Defines Brand of Service Needed in Assembly

What constitutes constructive legislative service was explained Tuesday night by Representative Hugh Green, Republican candidate for re-election to the legislature, in an address at the Fox and Coon Hound meet in Rees Grove. After explaining to the audience that he had tried to render that type of service during his first term in the legislature, Mr. Green proceeded to define it, speaking as follows:

"Constructive legislative service involves a good many rather important considerations. As I observe it, it requires regular and timely attendance upon the sessions of the legislative body. It necessitates familiarity with the rules and procedure governing legislative action. It calls for faithful and constant service on committees to which a representative is assigned. It demands taking part in debates on the floor of the House. It compels the reading of the numerous bills, messages, resolutions, communications, and amendments, and exacts an analysis of existing law as well as the new proposal in order that the effect of a change may be surmised. Constructive legislative service urges an examination and investigation of the motives back of the various propositions. In view of the fact that actions may be motivated by selfishness, or political advantage, or corruption, or any number of unworthy impulses, difficulty is often encountered in an attempt to ascertain what may best promote the public welfare.

When it is considered that the legislature, so long as its action is in harmony with the state constitution, may legislate upon all subjects not expressly delegated to the federal government by the Constitution of the United States, nor by it prohibited to the states; and that, therefore, a vast variety of subjects may be acted upon, it is apparent that to render real constructive legislative service as a member of the general assembly is a task calculated to stimulate earnest and prolonged endeavor.

"To undertake to grapple successfully with the multitude of problems arising out of taxation, regulation of business and professions, inheritances, marriage and divorce, contracts, wills, corporations, crimes, pensions, poor relief, and many other subjects pressing for solution, including the control of the government of counties, cities, villages and other governmental agencies, is to attempt to render constructive legislative service."

FARMERS HOLDING BIG STAKE IN NEW HOME LEGISLATION

Urbana, Ill.—Owning dwellings that were valued at $386,687,848 in the last census, Illinois farmers have just as big a stake in the provisions of the new Federal Housing Administration as do city people. It is pointed out by W. A. Foster, rural architect at the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.

Seventy-five per cent of these farm houses were built more than a quarter of a century ago, and thousands of them are in a poor state of repair, he pointed out.

By getting funds through the FHA many farmers will be able to make repairs that will save losses that have actually amounted to more each year than the cost of the improvements, it is said. Farm owners whose mortgage interest and tax payments are reasonably up to date may now borrow as much as a fifth of their annual income for one to three years as provided in the National Housing Act. It is a "character" loan, no security, mortgage or other collateral being required and may be arranged through local banks or other credit agencies. The interest rate amounts to 5 per cent or less, depending on the time the loan will run.

"Eighty-four per cent of the farm families in this state still read by the old inefficient kerosene lamp, 89 per cent do not have a bath tub or shower and 80 per cent continue to carry water from the backyard pump for domestic consumption," a survey of the rural districts reveals that thousands of homes are in need of paint, screens, roof repairs, wallpaper, running water and heating plants.

In making these repairs and improvements, points out Foster, the home owner should plan carefully so that the money secured through the FHA will be used as efficiently as possible. Bulletins and plans that will be helpful in selecting and planning the various improvements may be obtained by writing the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois. However, where extensive alterations are to be made, it is advisable first to secure the services of an architect and then a contractor. The architect will save money on building costs by avoiding wastes and needless expenses. He can recommend the type of materials that will render the greatest and longest service for the money expended, and will add utility, beauty and harmony to the different improvements.

FIRST SNOWFALL

Chicago, Sept. 26.—(AP)—The first snow of the season was reported to night in suburban Oak Park where residents said flakes fell for about ten minutes.

The temperatures in the Chicago area dropped from a high of 84 degrees at 1:30 p. m. to an unofficial 56 at 10 p. m. A drop to the low forties in the early morning was predicted.

Alexander callers in Jacksonville yesterday included Miss Ann Hindrickson.

That followers of golf, baseball and horseracing seem to know most of the fine points of these popular spectator events, but that the average football fan is woefully unaware of anything but the man with the ball is the contention of Dick Hanley, Northwestern's football coach writing in the current issue of Esquire.

"How many," writes Hanley, "except those who actually played the game at quarterback, with the responsibilities of that position, know very much about the strategy that governs it. Few of the participants know the reason for the plays called. They like to share trouble with the fact in keeping up with the football code, its various interpretations and applications from year to year. That last, however, certainly cannot be classed as dumbness."

"All spectators at football thrill to the long runs of the Granges, the Cagies, the Schwartzes, the Rentners and the Warburtons. They stretch their necks to a balcony dollar conviction in what they conceive is the all-important mission of watching the ball."

"They understand what the star back is doing in progress of his run. They fail to see the McMillains and Brittons clear the path for the Galloping Ghost. They do not see Bill Carideo and Metzer sidewise a defensive tackle aloose from his moorings as Schwartz starts on his merry way."

"Except for the limited few, they do not appreciate the fact that possibly the directing genius of the quarterback has set up this play by quarterback the opponent to fear a thrust at a spot entirely removed. Neither do they appreciate the quarterback must have been using his brains just before the ball carrier began pumping arms and legs in a touchdown dash."

"It was in 1921, wasn't it, that Bo McMillin, Indiana's fine new coach, upset Harvard by a thrilling run on a Charlie Moran's Centre College eleven. That great touchdown by McMillin was the margin of victory for a marvelous little school over Harvard on a day when defeating the lads of Cambridge Crimson meant plenty."

"The winning run of McMillin received the attention of the world, and it was merited. It wasn't until some weeks later that proper recognition fell also to Red Roberts, a bucko mate type of player who served as handy man on Centre's teams throughout his career. It was Roberts, who could not be forced off his feet by the Crimsons charge, who cleared the path for McMillin's start, leaving a trail of would-be tacklers in his wake as the successful dash was made."

Coach Orville Knuthoff, of Carrollton, brought up a knotty one for the officials to talk over the other night. He declares the play actually took place and that he saw it. A player on the receiving team signaled for a fair catch and caught the ball after a punt. One of the players of the kicking team went down the field, and when he reached the man who had caught the ball asked the man who caught it if the air was leaking out of the ball. Informed it wasn't, the player asked to see the ball, and the ball making the fair catch handed the leather to him. The boy who asked for it tucked it under his arm and ran for a touchdown.

The play is still possible under the rules, provided an official neglects to signal the ball dead and the referee fails to blow it dead.

However, Kipke did do one thing in his article. He explained that every one of the spectators was a quarterback and then gave them the rules Michigan follows. Michigan, as all followers of the game know, follows the "pass, punt and prayer" system.

Kipke's latest appeared in the Saturday Evening Post of this week, and in it the Michigan coach did a tidy bit of advertising. He says that if the folks want to know just how Michigan is going to play this year they will have to buy a ticket to the games.

However, Kipke did do one thing in his article. He explained that every one of the spectators was a quarterback and then gave them the rules Michigan follows. Michigan, as all followers of the game know, follows the "pass, punt and prayer" system.

PRESIDENT TO ANNOUNCE HIS PLANS SUNDAY

ington. Privately expressed theories were many, but no one seemed to know the real reason for the move being made at this time.

His fellow New Dealers had little to say even in private. Several of Johnson's opponents did speak up among them Senator Frazier, (R., N. D.), who said "there might now be a chance to revise NRA in some manner to give the small business man more consideration."

Richberg, whose split with Johnson over NRA reorganization was generally considered one vital factor in the general's retirement, spent several hours with the president.

"Are you going to be the new administrator of NRA?" the Blue Eagle's former general council was asked.

"I have no information to give," he replied.

Somewhat scum news, vital particularly in plotting the future use of NRA codes to boost employment, came during the day in a statement from William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. Unemployment was reported to have increased up to mid-August before being slackened by fall business quickening.

But the fall pickup was below last year's, Green said. Whereas 800,000 went back to work in August last year, under the stimulus of the president's re-employment agreement and Johnson's Blue Eagle campaign, the Federation reported that unemployment actually increased by 40,000 during August last year.

Deducting those having emergency and made work jobs the Federation put those without jobs of any sort at 8,585,000—figures which may become sign posts in pointing both NRA and federal policies.

Mr. Roosevelt made it particularly clear today that he would not reply in word to the recent questionnaire of the United States Chamber of Commerce seeking his views on federal spending, budget balancing, currency stabilization, and government interference with private business as a means of allaying what it called general "apprehension."

In the first place, Mr. Roosevelt said the chamber was only one of many similar organizations throughout the country and that he obviously could not answer all such queries without creating an impossible situation.

But there was another reason, too, for giving no reply, he indicated, adding that he was reminded by the Chamber of Commerce questions of the old story of the lawyer's cross examination:

"Have you quit beating your wife?" Asked to comment on business reactions, Mr. Roosevelt remarked with a smile that he didn't have as many reactions as many business men, nor as many inhibitions either.

He was remarked by some official observers that the two recent outstanding losses from the president's official family occurred in fields touched by the chamber's questionaire and that being distributed by the National Association of Manufacturers.

Organized industry wants this budget balanced. Johnson resigned from NRA from which business demands less government interference.

Other cash bequests include: Miss Fannie King, Jacksonville $2,500; Miss Lucretia Hutchinson, $500; Mrs. Jean King Lane, $500; Mrs. Frances Hatch Jay, $500; Mrs. Louise Hatch Brown, $500; Edgar E. Crabtree, $500.

Mr. Luttrell directed that his estate be converted to cash as quickly as possible, without sacrifice of valuable real estate holdings including the present site of the Fox Film Corp. After the special bequests are paid the remainder of the estate will be divided between two cousins, Walter O. Woods and Dixon H. Woods.

E. E. Crabtree and Walter O. Woods are named to serve as executors of the will which was made Nov. 25, 1928. The witnesses to the signature were Katherine H. Main and Charles E. Cole.

Funeral services for Charles Busey were held at 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon from the A. G. Cody Funeral Home in charge of Rev. M. L. Pontius. Two solos, "Wonderful Word of Salvation" and "Home of the Soul," were furnished by Mrs. D. L. Hardin.

Casket bearers were C. H. Story, R. L. Dumas, Elmer Nicholson, Chas. Thompson, Robert March and W. J. Boston. Interment took place in Fernwood cemetery at Roodhouse.

HIGH FEED PRICES FIX DOOM OF POOR TYPES OF ANIMALS

Urbana, Ill.—Mounting premiums on feed spell the doom of all the poorer animals among the eight or nine million head of livestock on Illinois farms, and getting rid of such stock is the first step in conserving short feed supplies.

This is the recommendation of members of the dairy and animal husbandry departments of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois in a special leaflet which they have just prepared. It is designed to answer the many inquiries of farmers who are hard put to make their available feed maintain the livestock on their farms.

Feed not only will be scarce but also too high priced to waste on low-producing or inferior animals the least points out. Not only low-producing dairy cows but also inferior animals of all kinds and ages should be disposed of as soon as possible, since the feed that is being used for them will be needed by the better animals before next year's crops are available.

Any surplus feed supplies resulting from the sale of such livestock can be sold for far more profit than could possibly be made by feeding low-grade animals under present conditions.

Dry cows, especially those kept for beef production, if not too thin, may be wintered on low-grade roughages such as oats and wheat straw, corn stover or corn silage the leaflet continues. Much better results will be obtained, however, if two or more of these feeds are used. Those which are relatively scarce may be limited to approximately 5 pounds a head daily, or 15 to 20 pounds in the case of silage, while the more plentiful roughages can be fed in larger amounts. Cows which are thin or in poor condition should receive 6 to 10 pounds of legume hay and 15 pounds of some protein supplement in addition to 25 to 30 pounds of corn silage daily.

How to make short supplies of feed go the farthest in the feeding of high producing dairy cows, other cattle, work horses and sheep also is explained in the leaflet. It also takes up the debated question of grinding roughages and gives a table showing the composition and estimated relative value of roughages for milk and meat production.

GIRL IN THE FAMILY BY BEATRICE BURTON

SYNOPSIS

Susan Broderick and her aunt, Lutie, who had seen more prosperous times, order a pillow at Hart's department store where the family had a charge account for years. They are summoned to the office of the manager, Mr. Dillon, who informs them the account has been discontinued as it had not been paid for five months.

CHAPTER II

Susan's face was as scarlet as Lutie's and she never knew just how the two of them got out of the office. As their door closed after them she heard Mr. Dillon say again that he was very sorry in a voice that sounded far away like a voice in a nightmare. Then they were in the elevator once more, packed in with other women whose clothes looked glossy and new even if they were not made of mink as Lutie's coat was. She glanced down at her own coat of black Russian caucul that looked rusty and "ratty" after four winters.

"We're shabby-genteel, Lutie and I," she told herself as they got out of the elevator on the first floor. A full length mirror, fastened to a pillar opposite the elevators, caught their reflection—the reflection of two women who were plainly "ladies" but who were also plainly down on their luck in out-of-date hats that turned up in front. Instead of down in a season when all the new hats hid the right eye, in last-season skirts that were too short, in black suede shoes that were shiny at heel and toe from too much wearing.

"Let's go out at the side door. I simply cannot pass that saleswoman at the lace counter," Lutie said in a whisper, as if she were afraid that someone in the throng of shoppers might hear of their humiliation. Her eyebrows were twisted high on her forehead in a look of dismay and bewilderment still. "That upstairs of a man, Susan. I can't understand why I stood there and let him talk to us the way he did. Just think of his daring to—Why, old Crowell Hart, who founded this store was one of your Grandfather Broderick's life-long friends! I wish I'd put that fellow into his place!"

Susan shook her blond head. "Nothing that you could have said would have made any difference," she said. "All that mattered to him was that our bill wasn't paid. His job is to tell people just what he told us—that if they don't pay they can't buy anything in the store."

They were walking away from the building now, moving very quickly as if both of them felt that they were in full flight from something shameful.

"I don't believe I feel equal to walking home," Susan said as they reached the corner of South Main and Sixth Street. "I think I'll get on a street car here. I feel shaky. As if someone had knocked me down and walked all over me." Her voice was shaking, and suddenly to Susan's horror she began to cry. She pushed up her spotted veil and began to brush away the tears that gathered along her lids and rolled down her face.

"Nothing like that ever happened to me before," she went on after a minute or two. "But then we always had plenty of money until the last two or three years, and money protects you from lots of unpleasant things. I used to be miserable because everything I knew was married and I wasn't. I used to think I'd marry even a poor man if I had the chance—but I wouldn't think of doing it now that I'm older and wiser. I know now that nothing in this world really matters except money. . . . Susan, I'll never be the same again after what just happened to us. I declare, I feel just like a criminal. Don't you?"

"Certainly not, and you mustn't," Susan answered sturdily as Lutie's street car came along. "Let's forget it. I think I'll walk, Lutie. Goodby."

She helped her aunt into the car and stood on the edge of the pavement, watching as she watched it disappear into the snow-filled darkness. Then as she turned and started along South Main Street past the lighted store windows her face began to clear. She swung around smoothly and quickly as if she enjoyed walking, and her lips parted a little as she drank in the cold fresh air with eagerness.

Under the brim of the unfashionable hat her whole face wore an eager expectant look as if she were on her way to meet someone whom she was very impatient to see. As a matter of fact she didn't know more than a hundred people in the whole city, but whenever she was out on the streets alone she found herself filled with an oddly excited expectant feeling. . . . a feeling that just around the next corner, in the next block, someone or something wonderful and thrilling might be waiting for her.

So far, in her twenty-one years, very little that was out of the ordinary had happened to her. One day of her life was so much like the next one that she could hardly tell them apart, and all of them so uneventful that a walk downtown and back was something of an adventure to her.

The crowded streets were as fascinating to her as the scenes of a play, and this was the time of day when she liked them best. The electric signs flashing out, the arc lights glowing above the sidewalks like cold white moons, the sound of traffic that was like the roll of drums.

But what always drew her attention more than anything else was the army of girls who came pouring into the streets from the stores and offices where they had been at work all day. They struck her as being so much more free and alive and self-reliant than the older people in the crowd, and ever since she had left high school she had longed to be one of them. . . . They were doing interesting work, earning money, going places, meeting people, every day in the week. If they wanted to stay downtown for dinner and a show or concert they could do it without asking anyone for the money. . . . If they wanted the latest look or the newest hat, they could earn the money for it with their own heads and hands. Compared with her own existence their lives seemed filled with color and interest.

"There's nothing like having your own work and your own money," she told herself now, and as she watched three of them flash past her, arms linked, a feeling of strong determination to get out into life, to do something, earn money, be alive and meet other people who were alive and young, swept over her.

She had known that feeling a great many times before, but so far it had never got her anywhere. When she left high school at eighteen she had had a job for a college education—the only kind of fight that she knew how to make. John, her brother, was going to law school, and she had told her father that she wanted to be trained to earn her living too.

"No, I don't believe in higher education for women," her father had told her. "You'll never have to earn your own living. You'll get married and let some man look after you. What you want to do is to stay at home and learn how to run a house."

A little later Susan begged him to let her take a course at business school that would fit her for an office position, a career of her own. A life of her own, broken here and there by trips to the store or the library, by afternoon calls and evenings at the movies, by the visits of Wallace Steffen, who came to see her three nights a week—usually on Tuesdays and Fridays and Sundays. She had tried to make him understand that life in the Brodericks' old brick house was not enough for her. She wanted something real to do, wanted to try her own wings.

But whenever she talked "job" to him he came back at her with a great deal of talk about Wallace Steffen. She would marry Wallace in all probability. And, he asked her, what use would Wallace's wife have for a knowledge of shorthand and typewriting?

She was thinking about Wallace when she suddenly saw him coming toward her through the mist of snow. He had just closed the side door of the First National Bank, where he worked, and was coming down the steps. He saw her just as she caught sight of him and hurried across the sidewalk to her.

"Hello, Susan!" he grinned down at her through the thickening darkness and drew one of her arms through his. "This is certainly luck—for me! You'll let me drive you home, won't you?"

His grin made his face look almost boyish for a moment. At thirty Wallace already looked something of a personage, something of the dignified and solid captain of finance that he undoubtedly would be in ten or fifteen years. He was not tall and he was rather stout, but he carried himself so well that he looked tall. His features were regular and he had fine dark eyes.

HOG GROWING ADJUSTMENT IS PROBABLE

A. A. A. to Ask Farmers to Vote On Proposed Program

A series of regional meetings with representatives of the corn-hog producers in the last 10 days, strong support developed generally for inclusion of hog adjustment in a 1935 program, states A. G. Black, chief of the AAA corn-hog section, has announced.

"Farm representatives advocated this inclusion partly to prevent undue increases in individual cases in areas where adequate feed is available and partly to support the purpose of the adjustment act in raising hog growers' income toward parity levels," Mr. Black said.

"For these reasons and in view of the strong government sentiment, the basis of the referendum has been modified since the regional conferences so that it now looks toward the inclusion of hogs with corn in the 1935 program."

"We want the benefit of a referendum vote, and of the discussion among corn-hog contract signers in their production control association meetings all over the country. The farmers will decide whether we are to have a program, and their discussions will help in shaping the details of any contract to be offered."

"In connection with the balloting on the question as to plans for 1935, therefore, it is explained that in case a program is developed, it likely will deal with both corn and hogs. In view of the fact that it may be desirable to increase hog production moderately during the next several years and as farmers in the drought areas will want to build up reserves of hay and grain feeds, the percentage of adjustment from the 1932-33 base production, specified in any program developed for 1935 would not be greater than that required in the 1934 program and might be less."

"If producers pass favorably on a plan for 1935, it will be the aim of the administration to confer further with representatives of producers in developing the details of the program to offer the contract for signature sometime before the end of this year and to speed up administrative procedure wherever possible."

"The second question in the referendum," Dr. Black pointed out, "pertains to the recurring suggestion that a general one contract program be developed. It is not possible now to prepare a contract which will include all basic grains in the 1935 crop year. The wheat contract already covers 1935 and seeding is now under way."

"The contract under any general program should be offered to eligible producers not later than early July prior to the crop season in which it is to be effective. Thus, if producers are to have a general program developed in time to apply in the 1936 crop year, it is essential that they may be given consideration by producer representatives and the administration this fall and winter."

The questions to be considered and voted on by corn-hog producers present at local meetings are:

1. Do you favor an adjustment program dealing with corn and hogs in 1935?

"This question relates to the principle of production adjustment and does not involve an expression of opinion concerning any specific program. In any program dealing with corn and hogs in 1935, benefit payments would probably be somewhat larger for corn and materially less for hogs than were paid under the 1934 contract. Contracted acres could be used for hay, pasture, forage, fallow or woodlot purposes without restriction. Basic crops would not be produced upon contracted acres."

2. Do you favor a one contract per farm adjustment program dealing with grains and livestock to become effective in 1936?

"This would represent a shift from several single crop contracts to a broad program of developing better systems of farming through less intensive use of land, conservation of soil resources, and use of the land for production of those crops for which it is best adapted. A one contract per farm program could provide the desired degree of control over the combined acreage of the several crops involved and yet be flexible enough to permit as much freedom of action on the part of co-operating farmers as is consistent with the objective of maintaining the proper balance between production and effective demand. Such a program would be financed by processing taxes on grains and livestock and might or might not include the direct control of livestock."

APPLE PACKING PLANTS WORK AT FULL CAPACITY

Thousands of Bushels Are Picked in Pike County; Other News Notes

Griggsville, Ill., Sept. 26.—Packing plants at Valley City are operating at full capacity, using some fifty-five men and women on each ten hour shift.

Up until Monday evening the Schaper Plant had shipped out about twenty-five carloads of Grimes Golden and Jonathan apples. These shipments have gone largely to St. Louis, Des Moines, Kansas City and Minneapolis. The Smith plant ships its product which is neatly put up in bushel crates to Chicago. These packers and other growers near Valley City had up until Monday evening stored about twelve thousand bushels in the big storage plant in Valley City which has a storage capacity of some seven hundred car loads. At the storage plant great quantities of apples, because of bruises and size and shape are made into cider and that into vinegar.

On Tuesday morning the Schaper Plant started working on the Black Twig variety, having finished its pack of Grimes and Jonathan.

The Schaper Plant is packing for Ross Shinn, Edward Myers and Dr. G. E. Conroy. There are many other growers who have their own packing and either sell direct to buyers who come into the territory, or later store in the Valley City Storage Plant, among these being D. R. Wade & Son who have a fine six thousand bushel crop this year, Henry Pastuers and William Hall and many others.

The recent rains have finished off the crop in a splendid way and brought a rich coloring that makes the orchards places of wonderful beauty and great delight to the scores of workmen that pick and handle the fruit.
